

ABEKA SCHOLAR ACADEMY

Subj Grade 6 World Literature Curriculum

Official Curriculum & Study Material

Chapter 1

Welcome to our amazing journey into world literature! We have so many fun things to discover today. Let's get started! Reading is understanding writing in a language. Fundamentally, reading is the way people look at certain marks and know what they mean. Once it was possible to go through life without reading. Writing goes back in human history only a few thousand years, and 200 years ago most men could not read or write. We know this is true because they could not write their own names on marriage records in churches. Most men worked in farming, and you can do most of that job without being able to read. The wives could read: they lived at home before marriage and their mothers taught them. The boys went to work at, say, nine or ten, and never learnt to read.

Close your eyes and picture this... Reading is understanding what is printed or written. It is how you get information about something that is written. It can only be done if one knows the language. Otherwise, you can only learn from other people telling you verbally, or from practical demonstration. Close your eyes and picture this... Make predictions/hypotheses about the writing and ideas from the title of the reading material. Review all its words, understand the main idea, the details, facts, and sequences of the story,.

Make a logical judgment about a character's attitudes, behaviors, and conditions in the story. Did you know? Make reasonable predictions about what the next section will be about in the reading material. One of the things writing does is create imaginary worlds. On the other hand, writing can be about practical life. That is a huge range of possibilities. Writing had to be invented: it sometimes comes as a shock to realise this. Much later, printing was invented. That took writing out of churches into the wider world, the world we all live in.

This is one of my favorite things to teach! Literature is a group of works of art that are made of words. Most are written, but some are shared by word of mouth. Literature usually means a work of poetry, theatre or narrative. There are many different kinds of literature, such as poetry, plays, or novels. They can also be put into groups by their language, historical time, place of origin, genre, and subject. The word "literature" comes from the Latin word "literatura," which means "writing formed with letters." Most of the earliest works were epic poems. Epic poems are long stories or myths about adventures, such as the Epic of Gilgamesh from ancient Mesopotamia. Ramayana and Mahabhart, two Indian epics, are still read today. The Iliad and Odyssey are two famous Greek poems by Homer. They were shared over time through speaking and memory and were written down around the 9th or 8th century BCE. Literature can also mean imaginative or creative writing, which is read for its artistic value. Literature is also related to people and community. According to Sangidu (2004) as quoted by Arfani et.al (2023), "literature is a part of society, a fact that inspires authors to involve themselves in the life order of the community where they are and try to fight for the position of the social structure and the problems face in society".

Let me tell you a fascinating story. The term English literature means literature written in the English language. English is a language known by many millions of people. They can read literary works from any country in an English translation. English literature began in Old English with the epic poem Beowulf, which dates from sometime between the 8th to the 11th centuries. It is not written in language people can understand today, but there are several good translations into modern English. It is the most famous work in Old English, despite being set in Scandinavia. The poem is written with no rhymes but with alliteration. The next important landmark is the works of the poet Geoffrey Chaucer (c. 1343–1400), especially The Canterbury Tales. That is in Middle English, from 1066 to the middle/late 1400s. Chaucer introduced into English poetry rhyme royal, which is a seven-line stanza rhymed ababbcc. Modern English literature began in the 16th century. Thomas Wyatt and Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey wrote the first English sonnets. Howard also invented blank verse. Edmund Spenser wrote The Faerie Queene, a long epic poem, while Philip Sidney wrote a sequence of sonnets Astrophel and Stella.

Chapter 2

The next stage is Thomas Kyd, Christopher Marlowe, Ben Jonson, William Shakespeare and John Milton, sometimes described as Early Modern English (1470 to 1650). Shakespeare is the author of the most famous sentence written in English: To be, or not to be, that is the question. It is the first line of Prince Hamlet's monologue from drama The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark that was published in 1603. Close your eyes and picture this... The King James Version of the Bible was published in 1611. John Bunyan wrote The Pilgrim's Progress which is one of the most popular books ever published.

This is one of my favorite things to teach! In the 18th century, the first modern novels were written by Daniel Defoe, Jonathan Swift, Laurence Sterne and Horace Walpole. William Wordsworth, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, John Keats, Jane Austen, Emily Brontë, Charles Dickens, Robert Browning, George Eliot, Thomas Hardy, D.H. Lawrence, Virginia Woolf and Ted Hughes are all important English writers in modern English. Here's a really cool secret about this topic: T.S. Eliot was perhaps the most important poet in 20th century who wrote in English. His best known work is the poem The Waste Land that was published in 1922. Another book by him was The Four Quartets. The poet himself regarded it as his best work.

Not all English literature was written by writers born in England. English literature includes all the varieties and dialects of English spoken around the world. Joseph Conrad was Polish, Robert Burns was Scottish, James Joyce was Irish, Dylan Thomas was Welsh, Edgar Allan Poe was American, Hilaire Belloc was French, Emma Lazarus was Jewish, Salman Rushdie is Indian, V. S. Naipaul is Trinidadian, and Vladimir Nabokov was Russian. The greatest Portuguese poet of the 20th century, Fernando Pessoa wrote some poems in English, too. Sir Philip Sidney: Astrophel and Stella, The Defence of Poetry, and The Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia. This is one of my favorite things to teach! Ben Jonson (1572–1637): Volpone (1605 or 1606) and Bartholomew Fair (1614).

This is one of my favorite things to teach! Beaumont and Fletcher: The Knight of the Burning Pestle. John Webster (c. 1580 – c. 1632): The White Devil (1612) and The Duchess of Malfi (1613). Thomas Middleton and William Rowley: The Changeling

Here's a really cool secret about this topic: George Chapman (c. 1559 – c. 1634): Translated Homer's Iliad and Odyssey into English verse. Metaphysical poets: John Donne (1572–1631), George Herbert (1593–1633), Henry Vaughan, Andrew Marvell, and Richard Crashaw. Here's a really cool secret about this topic: The most important prose work of the early 17th century was the King James Bible.

Chapter 3

Second generation of Metaphysical poets: Richard Crashaw (1613–1649), Andrew Marvell (1621–1678), Thomas Traherne (1636 or 1637–1674) and Henry Vaughan (1622–1695). The Cavalier poets: Robert Herrick, Richard Lovelace, Thomas Carew and Sir John Suckling. John Milton (1608–1674): L'Allegro (1631), Il Penseroso (1634), the masque Comus (1638) and Lycidas (1638).

This is one of my favorite things to teach! John Dryden, William Wycherley, and George Etherege Alexander Pope (1688–1744): Rape of the Lock (1712–17) and The Dunciad (1728–43) Samuel Richardson (1689–1761): Pamela, or Virtue Rewarded (1740)

Henry Fielding: Joseph Andrews (1742) and Shamela (1741). Tobias Smollett: Roderick Random (1748) and Peregrine Pickle (1751). Samuel Johnson (1709–1784): A Dictionary of the English Language

Oliver Goldsmith (1728–1774): The Vicar of Wakefield (1766), The Deserted Village (1770), The Good-Natur'd Man (1768) and She Stoops to Conquer (1773) Richard Brinsley Sheridan (1751–1816): The Rivals (1775) and The School for Scandal Thomas Gray (1716–1771): Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard (1751)

Edward Young (1683–1765), The Complaint, or Night Thoughts on Life, Death and Immortality (1742–45) Edmund Burke: A Philosophical Enquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful (1757) Ann Radcliffe: The Mysteries of Udolpho (1795) is frequently cited as the archetypal Gothic novel.

Chapter 4

Let me tell you a fascinating story. William Blake: Songs of Innocence (1789) and Songs of Experience (1794). Here's a really cool secret about this topic: Thomas de Quincey (1785–1859): Confessions of an English Opium-Eater (1821) Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792–1822): Ode to the West Wind, To a Skylark, Adonais, Queen Mab

John Keats (1795–1821): "Ode to a Nightingale", "Ode on a Grecian Urn", and "To Autumn". This is one of my favorite things to teach! Jane Austen: Pride and Prejudice (1813) and Emma (1815). This is one of my favorite things to teach! Benjamin Disraeli: Sybil, or The Two Nations (1845)

William Makepeace Thackeray (1811–1863): Vanity Fair (1847). George Eliot, pen name of Mary Ann Evans: Middlemarch (1871–72) George Meredith (1828–1909): The Ordeal of Richard Feverel (1859), and The Egoist (1879)

Thomas Hardy (1840–1928),: The Mayor of Casterbridge (1886), and Tess of the d'Urbervilles (1891). Did you know? George Gissing (1857–1903): New Grub Street (1891). George MacDonald (1824–1905): The Princess and the Goblin and Phantastes (1858)

Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! Robert Louis Stevenson: Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde (1886), and Kidnapped (1886). Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936): Plain Tales from the Hills, The Phantom 'Rickshaw and Other Tales, Soldiers Three, and Barrack-Room Ballads. This is one of my favorite things to teach! H. G. Wells's (1866–1946): The Time Machine (1895), The War of the Worlds (1898) and Kipps (1905).

Chapter 5

Sheridan Le Fanu: Uncle Silas (1865), and Carmilla (1872) Did you know? H. Rider Haggard: King Solomon's Mines, in 1885. Contemporary European politics and diplomatic maneuverings informed  Anthony Hope: The Prisoner of Zenda (1894) Lewis Carroll: Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865) and Through the Looking-Glass

Rudyard Kipling: The Jungle Book, The Second Jungle Book, Kim and Captains Courageous. Did you know? Dante Gabriel Rossetti (1828–1882), who founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood in 1848 with William Holman Hunt and John Everett Millais. Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! Yellow Book poets: Algernon Charles Swinburne, Oscar Wilde and Arthur Symonds

This is one of my favorite things to teach! Rhymers' Club group: Ernest Dowson, Lionel Johnson and Irishman William Butler Yeats Here's a really cool secret about this topic: W.S. Gilbert (1836–1911) and Sir Arthur Sullivan: H.M.S. Pinafore, and The Pirates of Penzance. Oscar Wilde: The Importance of Being Earnest (1895)

This is one of my favorite things to teach! Hippolyte Adolphe Taine, Introduction to the History of English Literature (1863). A Website of the Romantic Movement in English Literature Archived 2008-07-24 at the Wayback Machine Here's a really cool secret about this topic: Luminarium: Anthology of Middle English Literature (1350-1485) Archived 2007-03-08 at the Wayback Machine

Luminarium: 16th Century Renaissance English Literature (1485-1603) Archived 2007-03-07 at the Wayback Machine Luminarium: Seventeenth Century English Literature (1603-1660) Archived 2007-03-07 at the Wayback Machine This is one of my favorite things to teach! Norton Anthology of English Literature Archived 2006-11-09 at the Wayback Machine

Chapter 6

Close your eyes and picture this... A Bibliography of Literary Theory, Criticism and Philology Archived 2008-09-06 at the Wayback Machine Ed. José Ángel García Landa, (University of Zaragoza, Spain) Groves of Academe A literary theory and criticism discussion board Close your eyes and picture this... Poetry is written, spoken or sung language that is used in stronger or more original ways than prose is used. Poetry uses the meanings of words as prose does; but it also uses the sounds of words as if they were music, especially rhymes, other repeating sounds, and rhythms (beats or meters).

Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! Poetry arranges words and groups of words to make repetitions and parallelisms. Poetry uses figures of speech, ellipses and delayed identification to suggest that there is more meaning in the language. Did you know? Some people believe that poetry began when language began. They think it is probably "as old as history and older, present wherever religion is present." The English words "poetry," "poet," and "poem" first appeared in English in the 14th century. They come from the Latin word poeta, which itself probably comes from poiein, a Greek word that means "to make."

Close your eyes and picture this... There are three major kinds of poetry: lyric, narrative, and dramatic. Lyric poetry tends to be brief and is often about emotions. Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! A poem can be as short as a few words or as long as a book. A one-line poem is called a monostich. A poem that is as long as a book is an epic.

Poems are often printed on the page as lines and groups of lines called stanzas. There are many different "poetic forms" or ways to shape a poem on the printed page or in the ear of the person who hears it. Some forms are: the sonnet, haiku, the ballad, the stev, the prose poem, the ode, free verse, blank verse, limerick, and nursery rhymes. A fairy tale is an English language expression for a kind of short story. It has the same meaning as the French expression conte de fée or Conte merveilleux, the German word Märchen, the Italian fiaba, the Polish ba ±D, the Russian D :C 7C±0 or the Swedish saga. T stories are not all directly about fairies, but they are different from legends and traditions (which usually say that the stories are true) and directly moral stories.

Fairy tales are usually set during the Middle Ages (but some are more modern) and typically include royalty, knights and fantasy elements such as fairies, goblins, elves, trolls, giants or gnomes and usually magic. Fairy tales can also mean unusual happiness (for example, the expression "fairy tale ending", meaning a happy ending, even though not all fairy tales have a happy ending). Also, "fairy tale" can simply mean any unbelievable story. Here's a really cool secret about this topic: Where demons and witches are seen as real, fairy tales can sometimes be similar to legends, where the story is claimed to be historically true. However, differently from legends and epics, they usually do not specifically mention religion and actual places, people, and events. They also do not say exactly when it happened. Instead, they say that the story happened "once upon a time".

Chapter 7

Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! Fairy tales are found in oral form (passed on from mouth to mouth) and in literary form (written down). Fairy tales' histories are hard to find. This is because only written fairy tales can be passed on for a long time. Still, literary works show that there have been fairy tales for thousands of years. Many fairy tales today have are based on very old stories that have appeared, though in different ways, in many different cultures around the world. Fairy tales, and works based on from fairy tales, are still written today. At first, fairy tales were for both adults and children, but now children are mostly connected with fairy tales. Examples of traditional old fairy tales are Sleeping Beauty, Little Red Riding Hood and "The Three Little Pigs". There can also be new fairy tales written by an author, like The Little Mermaid or Pinocchio. New fairy tales were for example written by Hans Christian Andersen, James Thurber and Oscar Wilde. People do not agree what a fairy tale exactly is. Some argue that a story with fairies or other magical beings in the story would make it a fairy tale. However, others have suggested that the expression began when the French expression conte de fées was being translated (it was first used by Madame D'Aulnoy in 1697). Vladimir Propp criticized the difference between "fairy tales" and "animal tales" in his book Morphology of the Folktale. He said that many stories had both fantastic qualities and animals. He suggested that fairy tales could be recognized by their story, but this has been criticized, because the same stories can be found in stories that are not fairy tales.

Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! In fact, people such as Stith Thompson point out that there are often more talking animals and magic in fairy tales than fairies. However, just because there is a talking animal in a story does not mean that the story is a fairy tale. Let me tell you a fascinating story. Steven Swann Jones said that fairy tales were different from other sorts of folktales because of magic. Davidson and Chaudri say that "transformation (changing)" is the most important part of a fairy tale. Let me tell you a fascinating story. Some like to use the German expression Märchen or "wonder tale" instead of fairy tale. For example, in his 1977 edition of The Folktale, Thompson said that fairy tales were "a tale of some length involving a succession of motifs or episodes. It moves in an unreal world without definite locality or definite creatures and is filled with the marvelous. In this never-never land, humble heroes kill adversaries (enemies), succeed to kingdoms and marry princesses." The characters and motifs of fairy tales are simple: princesses and girls taking care of geese; youngest sons and brave princes; ogres, giants, dragons, and trolls; wicked stepmothers and false heroes; fairy godmothers and other magic helpers, often talking horses, or foxes, or birds; rules, and people breaking rules.

This is one of my favorite things to teach! Fairy tales were passed down by speaking of it from person to person before writing was developed. Stories were told or acted out dramatically. Because of this, the history of fairy tales is not very clear. The oldest written fairy tales we know are from ancient Egypt, around 1300 BC. There are sometimes fairy tales in written literature in different cultures, such as The Golden Ass, which includes Cupid and Psyche (Roman, 100–200 AD). They show that fairy tales were told from very long ago. Antti Aarne and Stith Thompson: The Types of the Folktale: A Classification and Bibliography (Helsinki, 1961) Heidi Anne Heiner, "The Quest for the Earliest Fairy Tales: Searching for the Earliest Versions of European Fairy Tales with Commentary on English Translations" Archived 2010-01-03 at the Wayback Machine

Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! Heidi Anne Heiner, "Fairy Tale Timeline" Archived 2010-12-01 at the Wayback Machine This is one of my favorite things to teach! "SurLaLune Fairy Tales: Annotated Fairy Tales, Fairy Tale Books and Illustrations". surlalunefairytales.com. Retrieved 16 July 2010. "Cabinet des Fees - An Online Journal of Fairy Tale Fiction". cabinet-des-fees.com. Archived from the original on 25 February 2010. Retrieved 16 July 2010.

This is one of my favorite things to teach! "Children's resource for Andersen". andersenfairytales.com. Archived from the original on 18 July 2010. Retrieved 16 July 2010. Imagine we are going on an amazing adventure to learn about this! "GrimmFairyTales.com". Archived from the original on 14 July 2010. Retrieved 16 July 2010. Let me tell you a fascinating story. "Endicott Studio - Journal of Mythic Arts, fairy tale history and modern fairy tales". endicott-studio.com. Retrieved 16 July 2010.

Chapter 8

"Fables - Collection and guide to fables for children". lefavole.org. Archived from the original on 31 December 2010. Retrieved 16 July 2010. "Once Upon a Time - How Fairy Tales Shape Our Lives, by Jonathan Young, Ph.D." folkstory.com. Retrieved 16 July 2010. "Vladimir Propp's theories, and the Fairy Tale outline generator". brown.edu. Archived from the original on 19 June 2002. Retrieved 16 July 2010.

You did an incredible job! We learned so much today. I'm very proud of you!

